CAPITOL LAWMAKERS
TO HAVE BUSY WEEK

Eighty-Eight Bills To Be Heard—Have Legislation to Regulate Jitney Bus.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., June 1.—While there will not be a full attendance in either house of the legislature during the coming week, 88 bills and resolutions have been scheduled for hearing before the various committees, 27 in each house, and 37 before the joint committee on finance.

The senate committee on corporations and the assembly judiciary committee will sit in joint session on Thursday to consider the quarter of bills introduced to regulate the jitney bus. The hearing on two bills was scheduled last week, but the appearance of two more bills in the senate caused a postponement so that they can be disposed of at the same time. The bills range from requiring jitney bus owners to take out liability insurance to placing them under the absolute control of the railroad commission.

The Hambrecht bill raising the non-resident tuition fee at the university to $176 a year, passed in the assembly, is scheduled to be heard before the senate committee on education and public welfare, as is the Bradley bill to repeal the appropriation for the physical education building at the La Crosse normal school.

The Smith joint Resolution, amending the constitution to raise the compensation of members of the legislature from $500 to $1,000 per session, comes before finance on Wednesday.

A MISTAKE MADE BY MANY
Don't wait for rheumatism to indicate diseased kidneys. When you suffer pains and aches by day and sleep disturbing bladder weakness by night, feel tired, nervous and run down, bile kidneys and bladder should be restored to healthy, strong and regular action. It is a mistake to postpone treatment. Foley Kidney Pills put the kidneys in sound healthy condition and keep them active and strong. Begin taking today. Good results follow the first dose. W. T. GAZETTE'S LECTURER
WINS INSTANT FAVOR

MISS PEET TALKS TO LARGE CROWD AT OPENING SESSION OF COOKING SCHOOL.

HAS TEMPTING MENUS

Brown, Crisp Doughnuts Were To-day's Special—Will Talk on Cake Baking Wednesday Afternoon.

Program for Wednesday Afternoon.

Subject: "Cake Baking."
Menu:—
Chicken in Fireless Cooker
Spring Salad.
Biscuit.
California Orange Cake.

All Janesville mothers are interested in cooking good things for their families. These will be taught at the Gazette Home Economics School which opened in Myer's Theatre this afternoon. Owing to complete preparations, made by Miss Florence M. Peet who will have charge of the school, the opening session progressed without friction or confusion. Approximately one hundred and fifty ladies enrolled in Miss Peet's cooking class this afternoon and every one learned something about preparing good things for the children.

Miss Peet believes in the old adage, "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach," and therefore tells how to prepare lots of things that men like but she said the way to the mother's heart is through her children, and to win the approval of the women who attend her school she always tells how to make things that children not only like but thrive upon. The doughnuts she made this afternoon were simply wonderful. They were rings of crisp, brown deliciousness and every woman in the audience with a boy and girl at home, watched Miss Peet most carefully as she mixed these doughnuts and as she fried them and copied her recipe with the full determination to make some of the same kind for "Johnny" and "Susie's lunch tomorrow."

One of the secrets of Miss Peet's success as a "Better Foods" lecturer and cookery teacher is that she knows just how to entice women about the good things she prepares. She said yesterday, "I have no intention of lecturing and cooking five days in Janesville without impressing the women here with my methods are good ones that will be of use to them in their own kitchens, and that good home cooking is the very finest art in the world and one that every woman should know thoroughly."

Miss Peet made other good things beside doughnuts today, namely an omelet, banana compote and horseshoe curves. The pastry used in the horseshoe curves was very fine and Miss Peet promises to give a practical lesson on cake baking lesson every afternoon while she is here.

Will Bake Ice Cream in Hot Oven.
Special attention is called to the extra session of the "Better Foods" lecture evening at eight o'clock. In her lecture she will talk about foods in a way to interest the men as well as the women. She will serve cake and ice cream and the men seen announced before, that this ice cream will be baked. Women of Janesville are invited to bring their husbands and sweethearts to this evening session, and Miss Peet promises to have baked ice cream enough for all.

Spring Salad.
1 head of lettuce.
Bunch of radishes.
1 bunch young onions.
Handful of cress.

Preparation: Wash all the vegetables and dry in a napkin, line a bowl with the outer leaves of the lettuce, cut radishes in thin slices, onions in lengthwise strips, pile all lightly in a bowl. Add center leaves of lettuce. Cut the whites of two hard-boiled eggs in rings. Garnish the edge with these. Press the salad through a sieve in the center of the bowl. Over all pour vinegar seasoned with dark red pepper, and a little lemon.

Banbury Tart.
Filling.
One cupful raisins, ½ cupful currants, two large soda crackers, juice and rind of one lemon, juice and rind of one orange, ½ cupful berry, one cupful brown sugar, one egg.

Roll crackers, mix ingredients. Roll pastry very thin. Cut in rounds, place two teaspoonfuls of the mixture in center, wet edges with cold, press edges together with fork dipped in flour. Snip holes in top with scissors. Bake until brown, in hot oven.

Flake Pastry.
Two cupfuls flour, eight tablespoonfuls crisco, ¼ teaspoonful salt. Just enough cold water to hold dough together.

Cut flour and salt and cut half the crisco into flour with knife until it is finely divided. The finger tip may be used to flush blending materials. Then add water sparingly, mixing it with a knife thru dry materials. Form with the hand into dough and roll out on a floured board to quarter inch thickness. Spread one-third of remaining crisco on two-thirds of dough nearest you; fold in first that part on which crisco has not been spread. Turn dough, putting folded edges to the sides; roll out, spread and fold as before. Repeat once more. Use a light motion in handling the rolling-pin and roll from center outward. Should crisco be too hard, it will not mix readily with flour, in which case the result will be a crumbly crust. Sufficient for two covered pies.

Sultana Muffins.
Two cupfuls flour, three teaspoonfuls baking powder, two tablespoonfuls sugar, one teaspoonful salt, six tablespoonfuls melted crisco, two eggs, ½ cupful milk, ½ cupful raisins. Sift together three times dry ingredients, add milk, then beaten eggs, then melted crisco. Lastly add raisins. Bake twenty minutes.

The Janesville Electric company has donated an El Grillo stove, an electric grill and stove, to be given away during the week.

REVIVAL CAMPAIGN
ENDS AT STOUGHTON

Madison Evangelist Has Great Success in Stirring Up Interest in Religion.

A great revival campaign closed at Stoughton yesterday under the leadership of John M. Linden of Madison, Wis. He was assisted by his chorus leader, J. Walton Strahl of New Kensington, Pa. The meetings were held in the armory and night after night great crowds were in attendance. The city has been thoroughly stirred and everybody is talking religion. Every church will take in new members as a result of the campaign and the Christian people have been aroused to a greater sense of their religious obligations. A greater glow and fervor for Christ and His cause are felt throughout the whole community and there is no doubt but what these will be felt for many days to come. Scoffers, of which there are many here, have been silenced and stand in awe at the power of the meetings.

Every expense of the campaign was met in the pan offerings, amounting to nearly five hundred dollars and a splendid free-will offering was given to the evangelist as an expression of appreciation for services rendered. Altogether there were 342 trail hitters. These include members of the churches who took higher ground steps in Christian living and those who gave their hearts to Christ for the first time.

After spending a few days with his family at Madison, Evangelist Linden will open a union tabernacle campaign on Thursday, June 10th, at Smethport, Pa.

"DANGER" IS MOST STRIKING STORY OF THE PRESENT WAR

Conan Doyle's Tale, Written Before Present Struggle, Relates What Is Actually Happening.

Conan Doyle, in his story of "Danger," written long before the present European war, foretold most accurately the part the submarine is playing in the present struggle. It has even been intimated that the story gave Germany its idea for the undersea warfare. This story is now running in the Gazette and is well worth the few minutes it takes to read the chapters.

The next serial to be published is "Penrod," by Booth Tarkington. This is the story that has been called by critics the best story of its kind since Tom Sawyer. It is the story that caused former President Roosevelt to forget his political troubles and cares of office until he finished it. It teems with genuine humor and interest from start to finish. "Penrod" will hold your interest from start to finish so look for the opening chapters.

ANYBODY who doubts that folks appreciate a favor ought to listen to men thanking the friends who started them using the Real Tobacco Chew.

Another thing, your new users of the Real Tobacco Chew go ahead and do the same favor to their friends and neighbors.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW IS NOW CUT TWO WAYS!! W-B CUT IS LONG SHRED, RIGHT-CUT IS SHORT SHRED!!

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end. The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much.

Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste!!

Ralph De Palma, the Italian-American driver, brought the world's greatest speed honors back to the United States from France, and smashed all records from one hundred to five hundred miles, when he drove his lightning Mercedes car to victory yesterday at the Indianapolis sweepstakes race.

When the little Italian had flashed across the line, after the five hundred miles of gruelling race, in which he drove without a relief driver, seventy-five thousand people paid homage to the most sensational pilot in his most remarkable instance of human endurance combined with mechanical perfection. De Palma's average broke all records, his time being 39.84 miles per hour, as compared to 52.47, the former record held by Rene Thomas in last year's classic.

Dario Resta, the sensational English-Italian pilot, with a French Peugeot, was close behind the American for second place, and an international fight went on throughout the show hours of gruelling driving between these two men for final honors. Resta because of his past performances, was picked to win, but De Palma's individual skill, outclassed that of the European, and when three hundred miles of the race was run, nothing but an accident would have thwarted the Mercedes pilot as he had saved his motor until the final sprint.

The sensation of the race was the finish of the Stutz team. Gil Anderson, Elgin winner, flashed across the line, right on the heels of Resta for third place, and close behind him came Cooper, the Pacific coast star, in another of the sturdy white racers. Eddie O'Donnell, the Milwaukee space-eater, was fifth with Burman, a team mate of Resta, next in line, and "Howdy" Wilcox, after a battle against luck and accidents, finished with a Stutz for seventh money.

The track was in perfect condition for the race, the previous rains having cooled the bricks to prevent friction and the burning up of tires, which enabled the pace-makers to set such a killing pace. Not a serious accident marred the speed duel, although Ralph Mulford came near being struck by Ralph De Palma, when the Mercedes driver came thundering around the curve at better than a hundred miles per hour, as Mulford was gaining control of his French Duesenberg machine after a tire explosion had hurled his car around the track into the wall. With a supreme effort De Palma closed down his throttle and missed Mulford by a matter of inches. Mulford's wife in the grandstand fainted as she saw her husband in the path of death. Cooper also had a narrow escape.

When the cars were sent off, Gil Anderson leaped to the front and became a pace-maker, setting a speed as near a hundred miles per hour as he could command of the fleet white Stutz. De Palma and Resta, close behind, began to jockey for the lead, and the American showed that he was not going to be run off his feet during the early part of the race. He hung back in fourth place, watched his motor, guarded his tires and waited. Resta soon took the lead from Anderson at the 150 mile mark. De Palma played his hand soon after and at the two hundred mile mark, De Palma shot around the track at a pace equal to 95 miles per hour, overhauled Resta and passed him in a burst of speed that brought the thousands of people to their feet cheering like mad. At the 350 mile mark De Palma came to the pit and Resta, taking advantage of the stop, shot into the lead by a matter of seconds, and then De Palma started to beat his foreign rival by wearing him down. Resta was forced to change a tire and from then on De Palma was never approached. When the American finished it was seen that he came near losing his prize because of a broken connecting rod, but luck enabled him to cross the line and not have honors swept away from him within sight of victory as in 1913 when Joe Dawson best De Palma in the last ten miles.

Only eleven cars were running at the finish, the terrific pace causing other drivers to drop out as the race grew more intense and fast. De Palma knew the strength of his machine and went humming along at the maximum speed his machine would stand up under and the others could not keep pace.

De Palma by his victory will receive over twenty-five thousand, twenty thousand of which was prize money for the race. The Mercedes driven by De Palma is owned by Peterson, the Chicago speed fan, and other money won amounted to around ten thousand dollars. Resta received ten thousand as prize money while Anderson got five thousand and Cooper $2,500. The first ten received money prizes.

COULON THE LATEST TO TRY "COME-BACK"

Logan Square Dethroned Featherweight King Keeps in Condition to Regain Crown from Williams.

(By Barry Paris.)
Chicago, June 1.—Johnny Coulon, the little Logan Square battler, who so long wore the crown of the bantams on his bald head, is going to try a comeback. The experience of Jim Jeffries and countless other gentlemen who have essayed similar stunts with disastrous results, has no terrors for Johnny. He is as confident that he will win back the championship as he is of anything.

Johnny, however, hasn't lived 28 years for nothing. He knows a lot of tricks yet, even if he is an ex-champ, and he is basing his hopes to take the title away from Kid Williams, on two things—one is that he really believes he packs a big enough wallop to put the Baltimore Dane away. The other is a well founded belief that Williams can no longer scale 116 pounds, the legitimate bantam limit, and be strong—all the expostulations of Sammy Harris to the contrary.

Williams can't make 116 any more and be strong. Johnny said several days ago, "and I know it. I also know that there isn't a 116 boy in the game with the exception of myself, who stands a chance to beat him. Will he fight me? I don't know, but I'll make it so hot for him if he don't that he will have a sweet time to square himself with the fans. He has never given me a return fight anyway, which is contrary to all ring precedent. I am going to post $1,000 for him to meet me at 116 pounds."

Johnny hasn't been idle since Williams defeated him in California a year or so ago. He always was a clean liver and he has not abandoned boxing since he became an ex. He is constantly in training and spends most of his time away from the little cigar store that bears his name up on the square.

In July, Johnny is going to Canada and spend all summer in the woods. Then he is going to come back, take on a few boys to get a good line on himself, and then spring the big coup. This, of course, is all according to Johnny, but the little fighter only weighs 118 stripped now and Joe Gibbons is in condition. And there are a lot of Chicago fans, particularly his Logan Square worshippers, who think he not only has a chance to slip one over on the blond Williams, but that he'll do it.

COFFEY STOPS FLYNN IN THE NINTH ROUND

Heavyweight Contender Knocks Out Jim Flynn in New York Bout Monday Night.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
New York, June 1.—Jim Coffey, challenger for the heavyweight title of Willard, knocked out Jim Flynn in the ninth round of their ten round bout at Brighton Beach Monday night.

Flynn was badly beaten by the Dublin giant and from the seventh round on was but a target for the heavy punches of the Irishman. In the ninth round the second of Flynn threw a sponge in the ring as a signal for defeat.

Gibbons Surprised.
New York, June 1.—Soldier Bantfield of the U. S. A., held Mike Gibbons to a good draw in ten rounds yesterday. Gibbons exhibited his usual cleverness, but was unable to solve the soldier's defense and honors were divided at the end of ten rounds.

Levinaky Wins.
Battling Levinaky outfought Dan (Porky) Flynn in ten rounds. Johnny Dundee, lightweight, knocked out Johnny Drummond in the second

THE ANSWER.

President Wilson indicates that he intends to make a decided answer to the German note. It would have seemed that the original note was strong enough not to have been misunderstood, but apparently the militarism of the German government ignored the necessity of making a straight-forward answer. The state paper as was delivered to them after due deliberation and thought. It is rumored that some members of the president's official family are open in expressing their displeasure at the answer as it appeared and would make strenuous objection to what might be termed equivocation of the issue at once. It is to be hoped, however, that cool heads and sane judgment will prevail and that while the note sent is so much to the point it can not fail to be understood, yet it will be diplomatic enough to bring about the desired results and not an armed strife.

The country is behind President Wilson in his present stand on the European situation. Neutrality is desired, but President Wilson in his first message demanded that the government of the United States assumes that the Imperial German government accepts, as of course, the rule that the lives of noncombatants, whether they be of neutral citizenship or citizens of one of the nations at war, cannot lawfully or rightfully be put in jeopardy by the capture or destruction of an unarmed merchantman, and recognize also, as all other nations do, the obligations to take the usual precautions of vigilance and search to ascertain whether a suspected merchantman is in fact carrying contraband of war under a neutral flag.

Germany's reply, in brief, said: "The Imperial government, in view of these facts (the use of neutral flags, the offer of prizes for ramming German submarines, and transportation of troops and munitions of war on armed merchant ships), indubitably knows to it is unable to regard British merchantmen in the zone of naval operations, specified by the admiralty staff of the German navy, as 'undefended.' German commanders consequently are no longer able to observe the customary regulations of the prize law, which they before always followed."

This is not sufficient, and while the German note expresses regret for incidents, still it does not explain its future attitude on questions of vital importance to the civilized world who have looked to the United States to make clear the positions of neutrals and the safeguarding of the lives of travelers in the war zone.

DUAL NATIONALITY.
This European war is bringing forth some of the peculiar difficulties of international law that have puzzled attorneys for years. The dual nationality of so many of our citizens has created conditions that would be hard to realize if an actual state of war did not exist. As pointed out some days ago, should the United States go to war with Germany the government could, if it wished, intern all Germans of foreign birth who had not taken out their first papers, and if need be, confiscate their property for use of the government. Now comes the question of persons born in this country, but of foreign parentage, going abroad and being subject to military service. The following letter explains itself and also puts a new classification upon American citizenship.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

Washington, April 2, 1915.

Mr. P. A. Lelong, Junior,

932 Union Street,

New Orleans, Louisiana.

Sir: The department has received your letter of March 27, 1915, stating that you expect to go to France on business in the near future and inquiring whether you would be molested by the French military authorities. You say that you were born in New Orleans, June 18, 1880, and that your father, a native of France, resided in this country about forty years and obtained naturalization as a citizen of the United States shortly before his death, which occurred about two years ago.

Under the provision of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution, all persons born in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States. Section one, Article VII of the French Civil Code, states that the following are Frenchmen: "Every person born of a Frenchman in France or abroad."

It thus appears that you were born with a dual nationality, and the department cannot therefore give you any assurance that you would not be held liable for the performance of military service in France should you voluntarily place yourself within French jurisdiction.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

For the Secretary of State,

(Signed) ROBERT LANSING.

What is true of France is also true of Italy and these two nations have many representatives in this country. The call issued for Italians to return to rejoin their colors means all Italians. Not only the residents of this country who have taken out their first papers, but others. Once an Italian always an Italian, is the motto of the Roman government.

IN THREEDNEEDLE STREET.

One of the effects of the war in England is the feminizing of the "Old Lady of Threeneedle Street." It is one of the amazing conditions that have been created by dire necessity. The financial fastness of the British empire has succumbed to the intrepid English girl. Though at the beginning of the war it was predicted that English banks would be forced to follow the example of certain northern countries and fill the places made vacant through enlistment with women clerks, it was said that the Bank of England, with its rigid traditions, would not be one of the first to capitulate. The suffragettes did not force those grim portals in their bellicose days before the war. War, however, hath her victories no less renowned than peace.

As a matter of fact, it now transpires that women clerks had been employed at the Bank of England even before the war began, and an official of the bank, nettled by comments he deemed too jocose, is quoted as saying it is no concern of the public if the bank has seen fit to increase its force of women clerks, adding that the domestic affairs of the bank should be treated with more reverence and reserve. The eagerness on the part of women to get positions in the Bank of England as soon as it became generally known that it was employing them in considerable numbers is proved by the applications that are said to have poured in by post and the streams of personal applicants that passed daily through the forbidding entrance. And there is no question at all that the young ladies of Threeneedle street have proved entirely successful in the service of their venerable protectress.

Golf enjoyed its formal opening Monday and the lovers of the good old Scotch sport showed their hands had lost none of their sunning during the winter respite.

Uncle Sam is apparently conducting the diplomatic relations of the world and not very much overworked at that.

LAST SERVICES FOR HENRY L. McNAMARA

OBSEQUIES HELD AT HOME THIS AFTERNOON AT 2:30—INTERMENT IN OAK HILL.

MASONIC GRAVE RITES

Leading Hardware Dealers From Surrounding States Are Present—Beautiful Floral Designs.

The remains of the late Henry Lawrence McNamara were tenderly laid at rest in Oak Hill cemetery this afternoon. After the most fitting obsequies had been conducted at his late home, 403 North Pearl street, the remains were taken to the funeral home at 403 North Pearl street, where the services were held.

The active pall-bearers were members of the Masonic order and were: Victor Richardson, Fred R. Sheldon, Eugene P. Fish, Harry Garbutt, Charles B. Evans and Herbert C. Garbutt. Ten hardware men from out of the city acted as honorary pall-bearers: P. J. Jacobs, Appleton, P. S. Ramm, J. Kornely, Milwaukee; W. N. Jones, Racine; R. C. Murdock, Beloit; L. Hirsig, Madison; R. M. Burtis, Chicago; Charles H. Williams, St. Louis; M. L. Corey, Ames, Iowa.

The floral designs were most beautiful. Many of them were sent from Wisconsin, Illinois and other states, being offerings of various hardware dealers, florists and friends. Locks and keys of floral design were found in many of the emblems.

Hardware dealers from surrounding states and from Wisconsin were present at the services to pay their respect to a departed member, and an officer in the state and national hardware associations. The deceased was treasurer of the Hardware Dealers' Insurance company of Wisconsin and was also a member of the advisory board of the National Hardware Dealers' association. PICKPOCKETS ACTIVE AT MILWAUKEE DEPOT

Decorated Day Crowd Attract Slippery Robbers—Take Money But Leave Check and Notes.

Pickpockets again plied their nefarious trade on crowded depot platforms yesterday. William Baum was "touched" for his pocketbook containing twenty-five dollars in currency and some change, and a five dollar bill and a number of receipts which the purse contained. Another and unknown traveler lost his purse, but it is not known whether or not the thief carried away any money.

Both acts occurred at the Milwaukee depot. Baum had purchased two tickets to Edgerton. When the conductor came to collect them he discovered his pockets had been picked.

He was carried to Edgerton and at once got in communication with the Janesville police department. They notified Ticket Agent Floyd L. Davis, who looked over the interior of the depot and found a rubber bag in the toilet room discovered two purses.

Baum's money was missing, but the "dips" were evidently old hands and threw away the $75 note and the receipts to pocket change should it happen they were apprehended by the police.

The second purse was empty. Baum's loss was the only one reported and was unknown to whom the second belonged.

Baum remembers being jostled while just getting on the train. The man in front of him grabbed the hand rails and lunged backward, throwing his hand into the pocket of the man directly behind him. The latter was pressed forward against him and in the jam evidently took the pocketbook.

Similar and repeated thefts at the depot caused the company some time ago to station a plain clothes man there for several weeks. The thieves evidently knew the company's detective, for during his presence no robberies were reported.

LET EAGLE SCREAM ON JULY 4TH HERE

PARK BOARD PLAN

Janesville Fair Directors Will Arrange Declaration Day Celebration With Many Features.

Tentative arrangements for the celebration of the Fourth of July in Janesville are being made by the board of directors of the Janesville Park association. The matter has been held back until the present, pending information concerning the belief that Beloit was also going to celebrate the fair by having a parade at once gone forward with their arrangements.

The celebration will be held at the fair grounds. There will be a mid-day and all the proverbial attractions for just such an occasion. During the afternoon it is planned to hold free vaudeville exhibitions, have a racing matinee and stage numerous other interesting features. Aside from the horse racing there will also be a program of trials for speed cars.

During the early evening there will be more vaudeville. A huge display of fireworks will be held after dark and there will also be several horse races with giant searchlights trained on the field as they find their way around the track.

Final arrangements are expected to be completed on Thursday evening when the board holds its regular weekly meeting.

There is also some talk of a regular circuit of None Such Brothers circus to be put on as formerly on the downtown streets. What will be done in this is just a matter of conjecture, but it would be a great benefit to the city.

REPORTS SEVERAL CASES OF MEASLES

City Health Officer in Monthly Report Points to Danger of Epidemic Among Children.

Danger from an epidemic of measles while not a serious one at the present time, was pointed out by Dr. S. B. Buckmaster in the city health report filed this morning with City Clerk J. H. Smith. The report states that the city commission at their meeting Friday afternoon. It was stated in the report that there were seven cases of measles on the city health officer's record at that time. The result of the spread from a case coming to this city from Chicago, where there are over four thousand cases of measles at present.

The quarantine is no longer required for measles, said Dr. Buckmaster, and many parents have the mistaken impression that children must have the disease and consequently they are careless or negligent about reporting the disease. It is a popular belief that one attack will render them immune, but this popular impression is wrong, as a child may have the second attack and the first attack will not protect the patient from another.

The law requires that a card be put up as a warning, but the adults of the family can come or go during the illness, for the place is not under quarantine for measles. At the beginning of the month there was one case of scarlet fever and one case of measles. Early in the month a number of scarlet fever cases were reported and were quarantined. The members of the household were vaccinated in a small child contracted the malady. The two cases in this family were from a mild attack and both patients have recovered.

Outside of the seven cases of measles that were reported, the health of the city is in excellent condition reported Doctor Buckmaster, and he expects further spread of the measles will soon bring the city free from disease. During the month there were twenty births, seventeen deaths, eight marriages.

CLUB PAYS TRIBUTE TO HENRY McNAMARA

Commercial Body Held Adjourned Meeting at Noon Today Out of Respect to a Former Member.

The directors of the Commercial club held an adjourned meeting today at the Grand Hotel out of respect to the late Henry McNamara, who was a member of that body for a number of terms. President Craig spoke fittingly of Mr. McNamara as a man and citizen and referred to his progressive ideas in business and his interest in matters pertaining to the welfare of the city, both in a financial and personal way, are too well known to need further comment. He was a wise counselor, a man of strong character and a representative citizen in every sense. The business interests of the city will miss him and the Commercial club will feel his loss distinctly. Be it resolved, therefore, that this memorial be spread upon the minutes of the club and a copy be also forwarded to the family.

WAR'S GREAT HORROR SHOWN IN TERRIBLE WOUNDS OF SOLDIERS

Depressing Sight Follows Visits To Hospital Where Men Are Being Repaired Again For Cannon Food.

Dusseldorf, June 1.—"You don't need to thank me for this. It long ago has lost its significance."

The "this" was a woman's wedding ring, worn and scratched. The message was blurred and poorly written. Ring and message, indicating some hidden tragedy that never will be revealed, were sent to Dr. Christian Bruhn, one of Germany's most distinguished dental surgeons. He is the father of his present life work—the patching up of soldiers whose jaws and teeth have been shot away.

The patching up process required much gold. Dr. Bruhn's clinic is free, and, thus far at least, unsupported from any official quarter. As his fame has gone out over Germany, however, his gold reserve has increased amazingly. A famous surgeon has given a heavy medal, the gift of the ruler of a German state. A noted litterateur has donated a similar gift from the King of Sweden. Wedding rings, rings, rings, gold coins, from England and from America, have been poured in on Dr. Bruhn, to be melted up and find their way into the mouths of wounded soldiers.

WHY IT'S UNSAFE TO CALL.
"IT'S POSITIVELY unsafe nowadays to drop in on any of your friends of an evening unless you like canned music," a neighbor of mine complains, "for almost everyone you know has some kind of music machine and you're sure to get their latest records crumpled down your throat before the evening is over."

Now personally I like "canned music." I cannot be thankful enough for the wonderful inventions which have made it possible for us to have the great musicians in our homes and to learn to understand and love good music at so small an expense.
But on the other hand I can understand how my neighbor feels and I think he has good grounds for complaint of the manner in which many people cram their records down their visitors' throats, or more literally, into their ears.
The desire to force one's pleasure on other people is almost as common as the desire to force one's opinions on others, and as old as the forcefully generous willingness to share one's religion.
There are a great many people who do not like music machines. In some it is an affection, a desire to make you believe that they are so accustomed to hearing the great singers in the original that they cannot endure to listen to reproductions. Others really do not care for music machines. Still others simply do not care enough for music to want to listen to it for any extended time. And then again, one should realize that tastes in music vary very widely. Your guests may have strongly pronounced musical preferences and your choice of records may not fit in with theirs at all.
People Like to Take Their Music in Different Fashions.
Furthermore, different people have different notions as to the way in which music should be listened to. My neighbor, who is frankly not musical, complains that people put on records that are utterly uninteresting to him and then all sit round in dead silence listening in awe and admiration. He cannot share the awe and admiration, but he has to share the silence and he resents it.
On the other hand I have known people whose ideas of pure delight is to start the music and then talk at the top of their lungs in competition with it. It is quite understandable that they might have guests who didn't care to take their music in just that fashion.
My Constitutional Aversion to Post Card Albums.
Although I am very fond of canned music myself I can easily understand the sufferings of those who do not enjoy this form of entertainment. By my own experience with the picture post card albums of the past decade, I have a constitutional aversion to looking at pictures of places and nothing appeals to me more than to see one of these interminable albums appearing. Half an hour spent searching frantically for appropriate remarks for each new page leaves me mentally exhausted.
Of course I have a music box you want to share your pleasure in it with your guests but be careful of the manner of your sharing. Mention its presence, make it plain that you are willing to play it, but try to be tactful enough to leave the final initiative to your guests. That is the hall mark of a truly skillful hostess.

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.
Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a woman of thirty and am as yet unmarried. Ever since I was eighteen I have known more men than I have known what to do with, and still I have numerous men who call upon me. Some of these men think of me seriously, and others look upon me as the boys used to when I was a younger, as a chum. I have had "thrills," but not often, because I rarely fell in love, and unless I thought myself in love I did not permit boys to kiss me, hold my hand or do any of those things that take place in porch swings on summer nights. From experience I learned that a telephone call from one boy could mean more than all the kisses in the world from another. My father died two years ago and my mother was already dead, and left me quite a fortune. I spent lavishly and from the improvement in my appearance I attracted more men than I had in my youth. Wealthy old men liked me and proposed, but, of course, I wouldn't have them. Now I am growing tired of spending money and life's energy on things that don't count and I long to have a home of my own, as my friends all have. I have taken an invoice of my stock and I find that I have to choose from, I decide to marry, a man with plenty of money and intellect and a receding chin. A boy of twenty-six with excellent prospects, but such a dear boy that he deserves a wife who can give him more love and understanding than I can offer, a good looking salesman, and a man of my own age, who gets along with me capably, has tastes like mine, loves me deeply, makes good money, but is selfish and conceited. Which of these men would you choose? It surprises me to be asking your advice in this matter, because until lately I have been so cock sure that my own judgment was right. It is like tossing up a penny and because I realize you would have to know the characters of these men to reply. I suppose, too, that it will be the man of my own age in spite of what anyone says, because he is the only man I could ever learn to love. Do you think I will make a mistake in marrying?

CINTHIA.
The man of your age is certainly picture perfect, the most desirable, but I dread to think of your leaving him. It is evident from your letter that you are selfish and as long as he is selfish I don't see how you are going to get along together. As long as

ENGLAND STRUGGLES WITH SOCIAL LAWS

Diverse Opinion Regarding Action to Follow Investigation in "War Babies."
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
London, June 1.—Great Britain is still struggling with its "war baby" problem.
Preliminary to expected parliamentary action in the case of thousands of unmarried war mothers carried away by sentiment in the vicinity of military training camps, hundreds of views on the subject have been forwarded in the press and at public meetings by persons prominent in church and society.
Several women's societies have taken up the problem with a vigor and are investigating reports that at least 30,000 young women throughout Britain now face the problem of bearing nameless children. Prominent among these in a committee of the National Union of Women Workers normally delegated by the Archbishop of Canterbury and York, Adeline Duchess of Bedford, Lady Londonderry and other notables to investigate and report. This report will be made to a committee at large composed of representatives of other organizations and of which the Archbishops of York will preside and a general program of relief will then be instituted. Over twenty women's societies have also formed a consolidated committee to deal with the situation.
The country faces an entirely new situation in the opinion of Muriel Wood of Hemsley, one of the most prominent workers who have expressed her views on the question.
"It is necessary to set up new social machinery. That existing law is not capable of dealing with such a problem. There should be some law to allow the father before the child is born."
The best thing in this emergency will be for the father and mother to be assisted to form a home when it becomes possible. Assistance might also be given the girls by a school of mothers. My last word would be, not glorify them and allow them to think they have done a fine thing for the nation. Do not taboo them, but don't make heroines of them."
The Bishop of Oxford said today: "We do as we can, with all the force of our moral to deal with the evil with kindness and without undue publicity. We have a part to play in this universal battle."
Mrs. Mary Drew, daughter of the famous W. E. Gladstone said: "The cases of the unmarried mothers should be carefully and individually dealt with locally, the cases sifted and differentiated. It is folly to place them all in one class. All life is sacred, and the younger, and frailer it is the more lovingly it should be tended."
Scores of others high in the social life of England have commented similarly public on the question. Authorities on English law quote the statutes that to legitimize these soldiers' marriages, if parliament should take such a step, would be contrary to all the traditional principles of common law in the British Isles.
The thinking public at large is watching the unique and troublesome question for the first time in England, with keenest interest. It meantime those who have taken the immediate needs of the situation in hand are expected to formulate a moral policy within the near future.

Man With Glasses.
It is a greater crime in the eye of the law to strike a man who wears glasses than it is to assault one who does not wear glasses. In most of the states this law obtains, if not in all of them.

TIMELY TIPS

Prepared for The Gazette by Nellie Maxwell, Department of Farmers' Institutes, of the University of Wisconsin.
As Wisconsin produces more than one-half of all the cheese made in the United States it would seem fitting that we, as lovers of our great state, should have it often upon our tables and in other forms than the simple wedge eaten as an appetizer.
Of all our foods, cheese is the most compact and concentrated. It contains no connective tissue, bone or waste matter. It is highly nutritive, containing twice as much food value per pound as beef steak. This same compactness which gives us a food with no waste makes it also harder of digestion unless it is eaten with coarser food which requires mastication. Cheese slips down the "little red lane" too easily and that is the main cause of indigestion after eating cheese.
The main reason that cheese is not used as a substantial food is that we housewives are ignorant of its value and so persist in offering it in the same old "bit" fashion.
Try one of these combinations on your family. We predict that everyone will like it.
Cheese Pudding.—Take two cupsful of soft bread crumbs, one quart of milk, two eggs, a fourth of a teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of paprika, one tablespoonful of butter and two cupsful of chopped cheese. Scald the crumbs with the milk, and butter and seasonings, and combine with cheese and eggs slightly beaten. Pour into a buttered baking dish, surround with hot water and bake slowly for an hour in a moderate oven.
Scalloped Cabbage or Cauliflower and Cheese.—Take three cupsful of cooked cabbage, one cupful of grated cheese, three cupsful of white sauce, arrange in layers, alternating the vegetable with the sauce and cheese and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake about thirty minutes. Potatoes, Brussels sprouts and other vegetables may be used in the same way. The smallest amount of cheese should never be thrown away. It keeps best if wrapped in a cloth dampened with vinegar or covered with melted paraffine when this is practicable. Grated cheese put in to a fruit jar and sealed is ready for any number of dishes which will be improved by the addition of a tablespoonful or two, even for flavor.

Cheese Toast.—Mix cream with grated cheese, season with red pepper and spread on rounds of bread, put two together, sandwich fashion, and saute in a little butter. Serve these for Sunday night luncheon with a salad if so desired.
Cheese Omelet.—Cook together a teaspoonful of cornstarch and a half cup of milk. Beat three eggs and stir slowly into the milk. Add a half cup of grated cheese and seasoning of salt and pepper. Melt a tablespoonful of butter in an omelet pan, add the egg mixture and cook carefully. Serve very hot.
A Damp.
"Was your request to Bliffins for the hand of his daughter successful?"
"Not exactly. The old man demanded to know if I was prepared to support him in the same style his daughter was accustomed to do."

Has Solomon Beat.
Fort Collins, Colo., June 1.—Old King Solomon and his famous decision on the baby claimed by two women as their child didn't have anything on the local police.
A chicken thief had visited nearly every roost in the city and his collection of fowls sorely puzzled the authorities to determine the rightful owners. Chickens look surprisingly alike and several victims of the thief claimed the same birds.
Some of the hens were taken about a hundred yards from their supposed habitation. They were released.
After sizing up the landscape every hen made a straight dash for her own yard and fussed around the fence in an effort to get inside. This method was followed in a number of instances and proved satisfactory.

Bread.

Contains all the body-building elements of the whole wheat grain. It is important that the body be nourished by foods that build bone and muscle and brain.

Bread is the real "Staff of Life" and brings nourishment in abundance. For your better health and disposition make it a point to eat a great deal more bread.

It was soon evident that the baby was in for a severe spell of sickness, and I discouraged about him, as he had begun to pick it up. He seemed so well and now—
"Come, Nell," urged Dick, "for his sake try to get a little strength, and he put his arm around her and had carried her up the stairs.
"I am so relieved that Mrs. Morton is asleep; she would be down to hear what I thought of the baby's condition if she were awake." The doctor was taking the baby's temperature and seeing that he was ready for the night. "I am sure you will have a quiet night."
"Do you think you can pull him through?" asked Olive anxiously. "I believe it would kill her to lose him."
"I can only hope for the best. He is a very sick baby," replied the doctor, taking his finger from his pulse. "I am glad that he has a capable nurse," he added as he took his leave.
Nell slept the sleep of utter exhaustion and was horrified to find it light when she awoke, greatly refreshed the next morning. She needed all her strength for the wearing, anxious day ahead of her.

The woman looked up with a start; the maid had let the doctor in unnoticed. "We are going to get the roses back in Mrs. Morton's cheeks as soon as we can reduce the little chap to order," said the doctor, going up to the crib.
"He still has a high temperature. Now, Mrs. Morton, you must let your husband take care of the baby tonight. It's his turn to get up and get sleep to enable you to meet the crisis."
"Let me care for him tonight," begged Olive. "I have lost no sleep, and I count on a good nurse among my home folks." The doctor will tell me what is to be done." She rose and went toward the crib.
"The directions are all written out in this tablet. I do not anticipate any change for these four hours, but telephone if anything unusual occurs. You should get to sleep as soon as possible; you are utterly used up, Mrs. Morton," he continued, turning to leave.
"I'll set the alarm for two o'clock and relieve you," said Dick.
"That will wake Nell up, and it is entirely unnecessary. I can sleep tomorrow all I need to. Olive was arranging the table by the crib.
"I am sure the baby will be in good hands and I will look in again before going to bed. You will get a much-needed rest," and the doctor left the room.
Olive came into the sick room in half an hour in a soft, dark kimono, with a book in her hand.
"Good night, dear," she said to the sad-eyed, anxious mother.
"Thank I shall be down in an hour or two. I won't not go if there was the least thing I could do for her voice broke.

CHAPTER XXVI.

I Change Garden Spots.

AWOKE one morning to find a long and—I was about to say interesting—letter from the countess. It was a very commonplace communication I found on the third or fourth reading. The sum and substance of its contents was the information that she was going to Virginia Hot Springs with the family for a month or two and that Lord Amberdale was to join them there. It appeared that her father, being greatly overworked, was in need of a rest, and as the golf links at Hot Springs are especially designed to make it easy for rich men, his doctor had ordered him to that delightful resort. She hoped the rest would put him on his feet again. There was a page or so of drivel about Amberdale and what he expected to do at the New York horse show, a few lines concerning Rosemary, and a brief, almost curt intimation that a glimpse or two of me would not be altogether displeasing to her if I happened to be coming that way.

It may be regarded as a strange coincidence that I instructed Britton that very evening to see that my golf clubs were cleaned up and put into good shape for a little practice on a course near London, where I had been put up by an English author, and who was forever dinging-donging at me to come out and let him "put it all over me." I went out and bought a new brassie to replace the one destroyed by the experimenting Rocksworth youth, and before I got through with it had a new putter, a niblick and a spoon, neither of which I needed; for the excellent reason that I already possessed a half dozen of each.

Keyed up to a high pitch of enthusiasm, I played golf for ten days and found my friend to be a fine sportsman. Like all Englishmen, he took a beating gracefully, but gave me to understand that he had been having a good deal of trouble with rheumatism or neuritis in his right elbow. On the last day we played he succeeded in bringing me in two down, and I've never seen neuritis dispersed so quickly as it was in his case. I remember distinctly that he complained bitterly of the pain in his elbow when he started out and that he was as fit as a fiddle at the eighteenth hole. He even went so far as to implore me to stay over till the next sailing of the Mauretania.

But I took to the high seas, Mr. Poopendyke cabled to the Homestead at Hot Springs for suitable accommodations. I cannot remember when I had been so forehanded as all that, and I wonder what my secretary thought of me. My habit is to procrastinate.

I almost forgot to mention a trifling bit of news that came to me the day before sailing. Elsie Hazzard wrote in great perturbation and at almost unfeeling length to tell me that Count Tarnowsky had unearthed the supposedly mythical Rothsoffen treasure chests and was reputed to have found gold and precious jewels worth at least a million dollars. The accumulated products of a century's thievery! The hoard of all the robber barons! Tarnowsky's! Strange to say, I did not writhe nor start with disappointment and rage. I took the news with a sang froid that almost killed poor Poopendyke. He never quite got over it.

Nor was I especially disturbed or irritated by the telegram of condolence I received on board ship from Tarnowsky himself. He could not resist the temptation to gloat. I shall not repeat the message, for the simple reason that I do not wish to dignify it by putting it into permanent form.

We were two days out when I succeeded in setting my mind at rest in respect to Aline. Countess Tarnowsky. I had not thought of it before, but I remembered all of a sudden that I held decided scruples against marrying a divorced woman. Of course that simple-minded matters. When one has preconceived notions about such matters they afford excellent material to fall back upon, even though he may have discarded them after a fashion while unselishly thinking of some one else. As I say, the recollection of this well-defined though somewhat restorless principle of mine had the effect of putting my mind at rest in regard to the countess. Feeling as strongly as I did about marriage with divorcees, she became an absolutely undesirable person so far as matrimony was concerned. I experienced a rather doubtful feeling of relief. It was not so hard to say to myself that Lord Amberdale was well come to her, but it was very difficult to refrain from adding the unamiable words "damn him."

This rigid, puritanical principle of mine, however, did not declare against the unrighteousness of failing in love with a divorcee.

If I have by any chance announced earlier in this narrative that the valley of the Donau is the garden spot of the world I must now ask you to excuse the ebullience of spirit that prompted the declaration. The Warm Springs valley of Virginia is infinitely more attractive to me.

I arrived there early one bright November morning three days after landing in New York. You will be rendered unhappy, I fear, by the announcement that I left Mr. Poopendyke behind. He preferred to visit an aunt at New Rochelle, and I felt that he deserved a vacation.

Before leaving New York I had a rather unpleasant encounter with my publishers. It was in the nature of a luncheon at which I was led to believe that they still expected me to supply them with the manuscript of a novel at a very early date. They seemed considerably put out when I blandly informed them that I had got no farther along than the second chapter.

"We have been counting on this book of yours for January publication," said they.

I tried to explain that the muse had abandoned me in a most heartless fashion.

"But the public demands a story from you," said they. "What have you been doing all summer?"

"Reminiscing," said I.

I don't know just how it came about, but the suggestion was made that I put into narrative form the lively history of my sojourn on the banks of the Danube, trusting implicitly to the imagination yet leaving nothing to it.

"But it's all such blithering rot," said I.

"So much the better," said they triumphantly—even eagerly.

"I don't suppose that you, as publishers, can appreciate the fact that an author may have a soul above skittles," said I indignantly. "I cannot, I will not, write a line about myself, gentlemen. Not that I consider the subject sacred, but—"

"Wait!" cried the junior member, his face aglow. "We appreciate the delicacy of—your feelings, Mr. Smart. But I have an idea, a splendid idea. It solves the whole question. Your secretary is a most competent, capable young man and a genius after a fashion. I propose that he write the story. We'll pay him a lump sum for the work, put your name on the cover, and there you are. All you will have to do is to edit his material. How's that?"

And so it came to pass that I took myself off that evening, for Hot Springs, secure in the thought that Poopendyke would attend to my literary estate far more capably than I could do it myself and that my labors later on would be pleasantly devoted to the lazy task of editing, revising and deleting a tale already told.

If you are lucky enough to obtain rooms in the Homestead looking out over the golf course, with the wonderful November colorings in the hills and gaps beyond; over the casino, the tennis courts and the lower levels of the fashionable playground, you may well say to yourself that all the world is bright and sweet and full of hope. From my windows I could see far down the historic valley in the direction of Warm Springs, a hazy blue panorama wrapped in the air of an Indian summer and redolent with the incense of autumn.

Britton reminded me that it was a grand morning for golf, and I was at once reminded that Britton is an excellent chap, whose opinions are always worth considering. So I started for the links, stopping first at the office of the hotel on my way out, ostensibly to complain about the absence of window screens, but in reality to glance over the register in quest of certain signatures.

A brisk, oldish little man came up beside me and rather testily inquired why there were no matches in his room; also why the hot water was cold so much longer than usual that morning. He was not much of a man to look at, but I could not fail to note the obsequious manner in which the two clerks behind the desk looked at him. You couldn't possibly have discovered anything in their manner to remind you of hotel clerks you may have come to know in your travels. A half dozen boxes of matches were passed out to him in the twinkling of an eye, and I shudder to think what might have happened if there had been a hot water faucet handy, they were so eager to please.

"Mr. Brewster gone out yet?" demanded this important guest, pocketing all of the matches. I could see at once that he was a very rich man. "Did he leave any message for me? He didn't? He was to let me know whether he could play golf with—eh? Playing with Logan, eh? Well, of all the— He knows I will not play with Logan. See if Mr. Scott is in his room. Tell him I'd like to take him on for eighteen holes this morning."

He crossed to the news counter and glanced over the papers while a dusky bellboy shot off in quest of Mr. Scott.

"They all hate to play with the old geezer," said one of the clerks—a young one, you may be sure—lowering his voice and his eyebrows at the same time. "He's the rottenest player in the world."

"Who is he?" I inquired, mildly interested.

"Jasper Titus" was the reply. "The real old Jasper himself."

Before I could recover from my surprise the object of my curiosity approached the desk, his watch in his hand.

"Well, what does he say?" he demanded.

"The—the boy isn't back yet, Mr. Titus," said one of the clerks, involuntarily pounding the call bell in his nervousness.

"Lazy, shiftless niggers, the whole tribe of them," was Mr. Titus' caustic comment.

At that instant the boy, quite out of breath, came thumping down the stairs.

"Mr. Scott's got rheumatiz, Mr. Titus. He begs to be excused."

"Buncombe!" snapped Mr. Titus. "He's afraid to play me. Well, this means no game for me. A beautiful day like this and—"

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Titus," said I, stepping forward. "If you don't mind taking on a stranger I will be happy to go around with you. My name is Smart. I think you must have heard of me through the countess and your—"

"Great Scott! Smart? Are—are you the author James Byron Smart, the man who?" He checked himself suddenly, but seized me by the hand and as he wrung it vigorously dragged me out of hearing of the men behind the desk.

"I am John Bellamy Smart," said I, a little miffed.

His shrewd, hard old face underwent a marvelous change. The crustiness left it as if by magic. His countenance radiated joy.

"I owe you a debt of gratitude, Mr. Smart, that can never be lifted. My daughter has told me everything. You must have put up with a fearful lot of nonsense during the weeks she was with you. I know her well. She's spoiled, and she's got a temper, although, upon my soul, she seems different nowadays. There is a change in her, by George!"

"She's had her lesson," said I. "Besides I didn't find she had a bad temper."

"And, say, I want to tell you something else before I forget it. I fully appreciate your views on international marriage. Aline told me everything you had to say about it. You must have rubbed it in. But I think it did her good. She'll never marry another foreigner if I can help it, if she never marries. Well, well, I am glad to see you and to shake your hand. I—I wish I could really tell you how I feel toward you, my boy, but I—I don't seem to have the power to express myself. If I—"

I tried to convince him that the pleasure had been all mine and then inquired for Mrs. Titus and the countess.

"They're both here, but the good Lord only knows where. Mrs. Titus goes driving every morning. Roads are fine if you can stick to them. Aline said something last night about riding over to Fassinfern this forenoon with Amberdale and young Skelly. Let's see, it's half past 10. Yes, they've gone by this time. Why didn't you write or telegraph Aline? She'll be as mad as a wet hen when she finds you've come without letting her know."

"I thought I should like to take her by surprise," I mumbled uncomfortably.

"And my son Jasper—why, he will explode when he hears you're here. He's gone over to Covington to see a girl off on the train for Louisville. You've never seen such a boy. He is always going to Covington with some girl to see that she gets the right train home. But why are we wasting time here when we might be doing a few holes before lunch? I'll take you on. Of course, you understand I'm a wretched player, but I've got one virtue: I never talk about my game and I never tell funny stories while my opponent is addressing the ball. I'm an old duffer at the game, but I've got more sense than most duffers."

We snatched down to the club house, where he insisted on buying me a dozen golf balls and engaging a caddy for me by the week. Up to the moment we stepped up to the first tee he talked incessantly of Aline and Rosemary, but the instant the game was on he settled into the grim reserve that characterizes the man who takes any enterprise seriously be it work or play.

I shall not discuss our game further than to say that he played in atrociously bad form, but with a purpose that let me to some degree into the secret of his success in life. If I do say it myself I am a fairly good player. I don't believe I was ever in better humor than on this gay November morn.

I even apologized for Mr. Titus' execrable footless. I amiably suggested that he was a little off his game and that he'd soon strike his gait and give me a sound beating after the term. His smile was polite, but ironic, and it was not long before I realized that he knew his own game too well to be affected by cajolery. He just pegged away, always playing the odd or worse, uncomplaining, unresentful, as even tempered as the May wind, and never by any chance winning a hole from me. He was the rarest "duffer" it has ever been my good fortune to meet.

habit of giving her pupils a certain word and asking them to form a sentence in which that word occurs. The other day she gave the class the word "notwithstanding."

There was a pause, and then a bright-faced youngster held up his hand.

"Well, what is your sentence, Tommy?" asked the teacher.

Many Varieties of Mosquitoes.

There are about two hundred distinct varieties of mosquitoes. In nearly every instance the males are the drones, the females the workers. In this respect they symbolize an ideal condition of martial felicity to which, under the guidance of the suffragettes, the mere brute man may hope to attain in the fullness of time. All the stinging is done by the female. Blood, indeed, is necessary to her existence. It has a determinative influence on the sex of her offspring. Fed on a farinaceous or fruit diet, she languishes and dies.

"Invar" Tuning Fork.

A French scientist has made a tuning fork that, it is claimed, is not affected by changes in temperature, and is therefore invariable. The material used in the fork is Guillaume steel, also called "Invar" on account of its almost complete insensibility to temperature variations.

Both in 'Sad Condition.

Sublime satisfaction in one's own powers must be a very delightful condition, but a celebrated English musician, Doctor Arne, who flourished in the first half of the seventeenth century, for once wittily turned the tables on some singers of this type.

He was asked to decide on the respective powers of two vocalists whose talents existed entirely in their own imaginations. After hearing them Doctor Arne said to one: "You are the worst singer I ever heard in my life. Then, exclaimed the other: 'I win.'"

"No," answered the judge. "You can't sing at all."

Both in 'Sad Condition.

Sublime satisfaction in one's own powers must be a very delightful condition, but a celebrated English musician, Doctor Arne, who flourished in the first half of the seventeenth century, for once wittily turned the tables on some singers of this type.

He was asked to decide on the respective powers of two vocalists whose talents existed entirely in their own imaginations. After hearing them Doctor Arne said to one: "You are the worst singer I ever heard in my life. Then, exclaimed the other: 'I win.'"

"No," answered the judge. "You can't sing at all."

GOLF CLUB MONDAY
IS FESTIVE EVENT

Large Crowds Attend Links During Day.—E. P. Wilcox Wins Sweepstake Event.—Pretty Dance at Night.

A large number of members of the Janesville Golf club, new and old, and many friends attended the grand opening Monday at the club house, where they participated in an affair that will be remembered as one of the big days of the season at the links.

One of the most important events of the day was the sweepstake match, with handicaps, in which twenty-two golfers were entered. Five prizes were awarded, E. P. Wilcox taking first after an exciting contest. He was presented with three new golf balls. Second prize, or two new golf balls, went to H. E. McCoy, while P. S. Barnes, A. P. Burnham and Warren V. Wheelock took third, fourth and fifth prize respectively, each being presented with one new golf ball.

Following the sweepstake event of yesterday, it was announced at the house that similar events will be held every Sunday morning, in which it is expected the majority of the members will participate.

With the social affairs in charge of Mrs. Sue Wilcox yesterday bridge was enjoyed by the ladies while the men were engaged in the handicap match. At six o'clock a very large and handsome was held. Because of the large attendance, it was impossible to accommodate all the guests at one time. One hundred and sixty were served at the tea. The latest steps in the dance world were exhibited by Mr. and Mrs. George Hatch, and were greatly appreciated. The Hatch three-piece orchestra, furnished music during the day. The decorations were most beautiful and with the newly painted interior, the club house was a place of splendor and beauty.

Many young people from the city attended the dancing party in the evening that closed the day's activities. Two hundred were present at this affair. This event was greatly enjoyed, as the weather was ideal for the exponents of the Terpsichorean art to dance to the new and popular strains.

Mrs. Stanley Tallman won first prize at cards in the afternoon, and was presented with a beautiful crystal vase. The consolation premium went to Mrs. George McKee.

DISMISS CASE AGAINST YOUTHS HELD IN CUSTODY

On motion of District Attorney S. C. Dunwiddie the cases against Rube Wadley and Harry Ferguson, the two young men taken on suspicion by the police, were dismissed from court this morning and ordered to leave the city in the shortest possible space of time. The two young men were arrested last week and a number of watches and some jewelry were found on their persons. Inquiries by the police failed to reveal where the young men obtained the goods and none of the authorities of other cities reported missing goods corresponding to those found on the men.
